Good Times!

“Go to the head of the class . . .”

The educators in our school are often the butt of jokes and the object of criticism. Teachers have an often thankless job, but they are occasionally reminded that they bestow upon their students invaluable knowledge which will be depended upon in future years as these students move into adulthood. Administrators typically hold a “bad guy” label during the performance of their duties, and few people recognize or appreciate their efforts to demand the best of each student enrolled in BHS.

The teaching staff members are rarely visualized past their desks and chalkboards unless the teacher coaches a sport or sponsors an organization. Many of Broadway's educators are accomplished crafters, musicians, athletes, and community leaders. Their hobbies do extend beyond grading papers and writing time slips.

Too many times students forget that the entire staff works at BHS for the benefit of the students. This list is not only limited to the faculty but also includes the custodial staff, cafeteria workers, secretaries, and aides. So, to the BHS staff, whose “thank-you” might have been forgotten, we say thanks.

"And then we became seniors . . . juniors . . ."

At an upcoming freshman's first tour of Broadway High School during eighth grade orientation, the possibility of deciphering the ways and means of the hallway system seems remote. These students' reign and seniority over at John C. Myers is soon counterattacked by their being the babes once again. The October Homecoming float is the class' first attempt to work together, but in class this togetherness is shattered for the first time by intermingling upperclassmen with underclassmen. Uncertainty abounds and is obvious by the scared silence of the ninth grade bleachers during the cheerleaders' roll call. It is hard to be outspoken, though, when their identity is questioned by their being labeled "Natalie's little sister" or "Rob's baby brother."

Sophomore life is much easier. Teachers have learned more names, and there is a younger class following tenth graders. Throughout the last year of required health and physical education new mini-classes are part of the curriculum. Hunter Safety is learned, and Drivers' Ed and Sex Ed help everyone to learn "all the things he/she ever wanted to know." Classes are advancing to high levels of difficulty, but students are over "freshman fright" and are getting more involved.

A junior's year is a busy year. Eleventh graders are finally considered upperclassmen, meaning junior varsity players can be varsity, most students have job eligibility, and MVTC classes accept two-year enrollees. PSATs begin to prepare college-bound pupils, and as each person reaches sixteen, he or she is eligible for a driver's license. Juniors feel as if they are constantly organizing, exercising, or thinking of ideas for fundraisers, and they usually are. A main event of the year is providing and going to the Junior-Senior Prom after which there are only a few days before juniors can be labeled seniors.

For some students their senior year is the shortest; for others, the longest. Serious thoughts enter twelfth-grade minds as they scramble to improve SAT scores and meet college application deadlines. Many pupils work part-time or full-time while trying to attain all of the required credits and make-up classes before June. Intermingled among these headaches are senior privileges to take advantage of and look forward to. Honor students are masters on slave day; seniors can be first through the lunch line, attend the banquet, go on government field trips, get yearbooks first, be entitled to a motto, flower, and colors, and have the prom presented in their honor.

Getting an education while collecting four years worth of memories is like having the cake and eating it too, and the whipped creme upon these good times is the final field day of graduation in June.

Betty Constain

Estudiante de Colombia

If you were 2,500 miles away from your home, family, and friends for almost a year in a foreign country that has strange customs and speaks a different language, would you be happy? Somehow Beatriz Eugenia Constain, known to most BHS students as Betty, always manages a friendly smile. She is an exchange student from Cali, Colombia, and is being hosted by Gwen Roller and family. She has already learned much about the American way of life after living on the Rollers' dairy farm. She describes her stay as "different" but "a good experience." Her new rural environment contrasts sharply with her family's modern apartment in Cali, a city of two million people.

When asked what her favorite American food is, she smiles and says, without hesitation, "Milkshakes." She also has acquired an American music taste for Air Supply. Betty is quickly learning how American entertainment dents the pocketbook, since she compares prices to paying only one dollar for both a movie and munchies with her friends in Colombia. When it comes to school, however, Betty believes that students in the U.S. have it easy. In Colombia she attended a Catholic school where her day began at 6:00 a.m. and included fourteen subjects, not five or six.

Betty has adjusted very well to life in the U.S. Her well-rounded, friendly personality is an asset to B.H.S. When asked if she is glad she decided to be an exchange student, she pleasantly smiles and responds with a "Sí."

Twice a Senior!

Imagine being 28 years old and still in high school. Forget it, right? Doug Good did not forget it and is now the senior with the most seniority in the graduating class of 1985. First set to receive his diploma in 1975, he dropped out of Broadway High during the final semester of his senior year. Doug knew he was not going to be able to graduate, so he quit. A quitter, however, is exactly what Doug is not. He had never failed before, but throughout the 1974-75 school year he worked a late job which took away from homework and sleep time and consequently lowered his grades.

The decade between his senior years Doug worked at various jobs. He was too frustrated to return to BHS for the 1975-76 school year, and after not going back one year, it was easier to keep putting it off. He had convinced himself that he did not need his education, but he soon found out he was wrong. Doug had been thinking for a while about going back to school, but this is the first year he "got the nerve to do it." Needing only 2½ credits to graduate, he returned to BHS last summer to take government. With the support of family and friends he enrolled as a senior taking algebra and adding English literature to his schedule second semester.

For now Doug works in the Emergency Room at Rockingham Memorial Hospital and hopes to become an x-ray technician. He plans to begin his training by joining the Air Force in September (for which he needs his diploma).

"It was rough at first," says Doug. He noticed that things have changed at Broadway. He thinks the students are a lot more brave and open about what they say and whom they say it to. He feels respect for fellow students, though, and that impresses him. Now he says he feels like a senior again and fits in. We think so too!

Eye of the Tiger

Zen, Ken, Ich! (Mind, Fist, One!) These three Japanese words seem to sum up the total martial arts experience. Senior Scott Leake has been involved in the Halterman Institute Karate program since tenth grade. He felt that he was no good in other sports and that Karate seemed to be something at which he could excel. He has already acquired his blue belt and needs six more belts to reach his goal of black belt.

Scott competes in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Washington, D.C., and Virginia. He has placed in many events and enjoys the challenge of "fighting" other blue belts. He says it's hard to practice four days each week to be prepared for these contests.

With Scott, school work always comes first. He feels that his Karate rarely interferes with his studies, but when it does, he will stay out of practice to catch up on homework. He says, "Those who become obsessed with it might have a hard time deciding between Karate practice and homework."

Scott's future goal is to someday open his own Karate school. He, of course, would be the sensei (master). First, though, he has to get his black belt, and that day is far away. Says Scott, "I've been a blue belt since May, and I've been waiting to test for the green belt it seems like forever. I guess it just takes patience, but eventually I'll make it!"

Good luck, Scott!

“We show our diverse interests by joining”

Sometimes school clubs are as informative to students as their classes, if not more. Organizations that concentrate on specific areas allow students to develop their special interests constructively and can be perfect preparation for a student's future. Every club that covers a subject directly related to a course at Broadway High is given class time to meet on a planned “Club Day” once a month. These co-curricular clubs deal with all areas from agriculture to business, academics to industrial arts, home economics to languages, government to employment, and science to music.

Non-curricular organizations, too, meet and stress areas of interest to the students. Academic trivia quizzing, Christian life, drama, and year-book are not directly related to a class within the school, yet students are involved. School time is not sacrificed for their meetings; therefore they are held out of class hours, but school grounds and facilities are available. Also, more advanced in training than school clubs, the Massanutten Vocational Technical Center provides students with specified job awareness and skill. These students attend BHS only two or three periods per day and attend MVTC either in the morning or afternoon. Juniors and sometimes sophomores are eligible for Vo Tech. This option is for those who make early vocational career decisions.

Involvement in some type of club or organization can improve an individual's outlook on school incredibly. With so many of these activities to choose from there is certainly one for every student's interests.

"We strove to win in a sportsmanlike manner"

In the childhood fun of "duck, duck, goose," plastic bats, and spongeballs it is a dream to envision oneself graduating to an organized high school sport. The transition from midget leagues, farm teams, pony leagues, and Pepsi-cola tennis lessons to intramurals and eighth-grade sports is a big step for maturing athletes. Once at Broadway High, athletic students are encouraged to join a junior varsity team or squad in order to prepare for varsity competition. Athletes require conditioned bodies and minds that are built from their preparation.

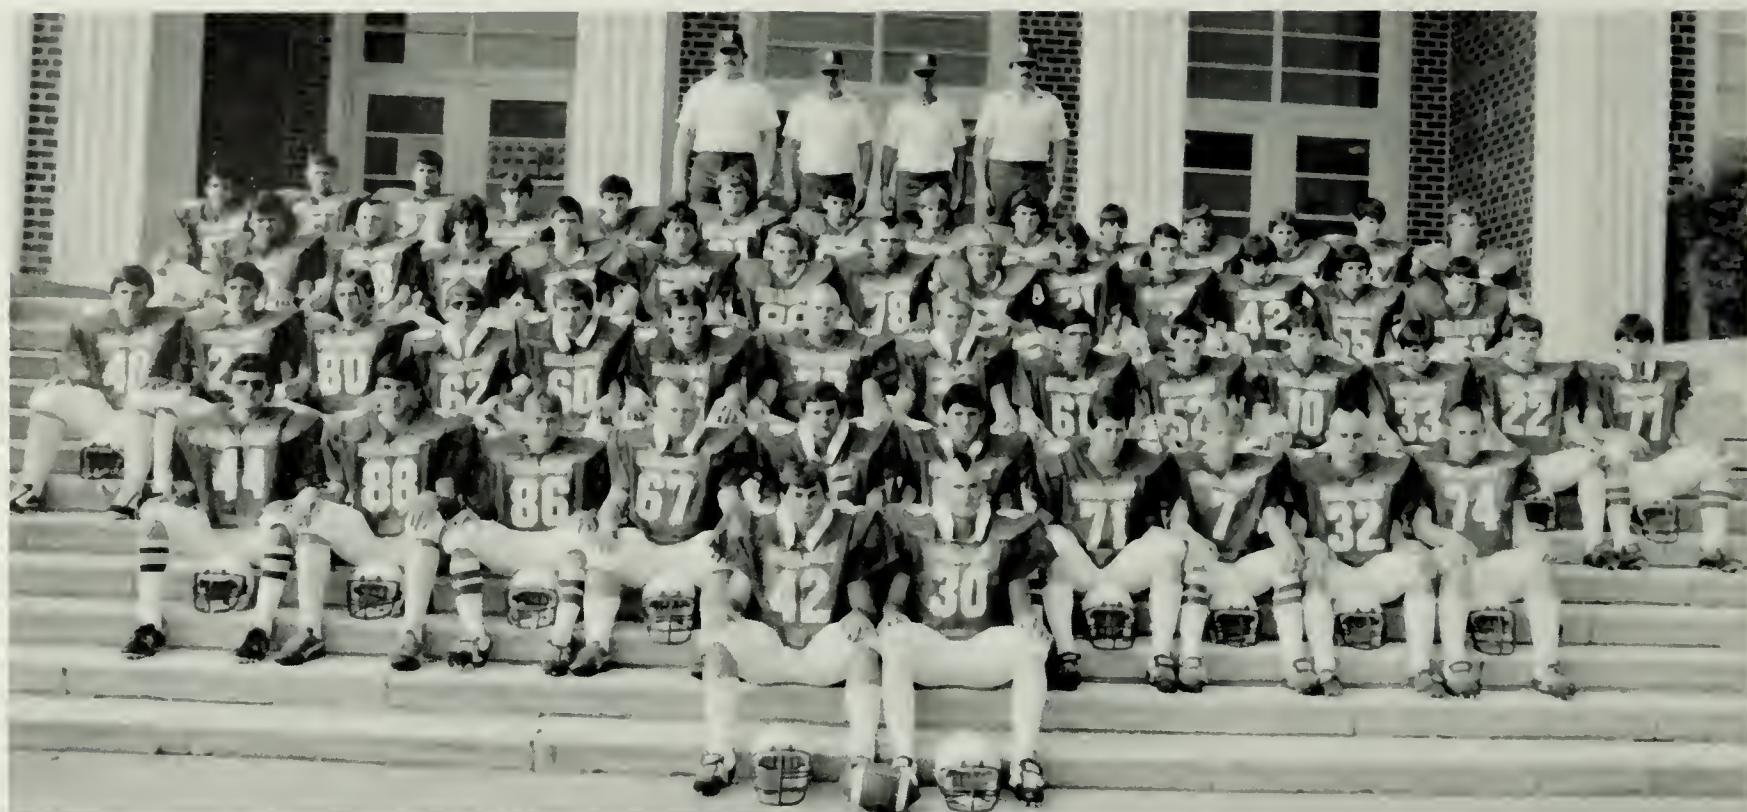

BHS sports kicked off a championship fall with varsity and j.v. football, cross country, varsity and j.v. girls' basketball, and fall cheerleading. The winter drifted into the varsity and j.v. seasonal boys' basketball, girls' volleyball, and winter cheerleading. Spring bloomed baseball, softball, tennis, and track. Other seasonal sports-minded individuals are the coaches, managers, spotters, and statisticians, who are too often forgotten. Also, while few athletes last all three seasons, athletic trainers must.

The requirements of competing, showing good sportsmanship, working as a team, and giving 100 per cent learned by an athlete are the same rules to follow through the plays of life.

"A Changing Season"

Team Members: Theresa Litten, Crystal Funk, Kerri Hively, Sharon Martz, Susan Ritchie, Linette See, Sherry Spiggle, Melody Darrow, Donna Martz, Carrie Shull is the coach.

Again the 1984 basketball season in terms of wins and losses could appear as somewhat of a disappointment. This year, however, the varsity record was improved by three wins. "The key to the basketball team's success in the future is a lot of hard work during the off-season and the desire to stay with the sport all four years," says Coach Carrie Shull. More importantly, though, the athletes have learned that a team does not have to win every game played, and the relationships made with teammates as well as other athletes are the experiences worth remembering long past high school.

The girls' varsity basketball "changing season" is explained by the bits of spring, summer, fall and winter each athlete experiences during the course of a single basketball season. At times moods vary from up, down, good and okay, but each member manages to grow and learn many valuable lessons.

Donna shows strategy as Mel drives baseline.

Actions speak louder than words as Susan shows excitement.

"Did you see me trip that girl?"

Kerri shows concentration is the key to a successful foul shot.

Linney shows determination as she drives for a power lay-up.

"Special moments need to be remembered"

As adults look back on their high school years, all memories are considered special. Those one-time events such as prom, homecoming, Valentine's, drama productions, trips, banquets, and special honors won are extra-special and outshine the daily happenings in the checkered halls of Broadway High. The four years of memorable moments create a series of mind treasures always to be considered some of the best of times. The people, however, are what make high school activities so memorable. Those who took the first bow, those who were crowned, those who made it happen, and those who were there all give meaning to the memories.

"We say a grateful thanks to our supporters"

Broadway High School supporters come from "the Mash" deep in Timberville, "the sticks" of Bergton, everywhere between, and even out of BHS territory into the town of New Market and the city of Harrisonburg. The school depends on this extended community as it takes advantage of its residents' support. Business owners display posters, purchase advertisements, and employ or recommend students. Fans come to events, buy organizational fundraisers in the form of candy, posters, candles and T-shirts. Others educate the students or simply believe in them. Sometimes such loyalty is thought forgotten, but what an asset to BHS it is. We sincerely thank each of our supporters.

We probably insured your Grandfather's home when he and your Grandmother set up housekeeping in this area. We most likely have your parents' home insured and quite possibly their farm as well. So, when it comes time for you to establish your own home in Virginia, remember your family's insurance company. The one that has been insuring property in Virginia, and only Virginia, since 1869.

HOORAY FOR BROADWAY IT'S OUR HOME TOWN.

Let's Talk Community Pride.

Sure, we're your local telephone company. We're proud of that. We're proud of our community, too. We live here.

Our kids, like your kids, go to neighborhood schools. We sit together at PTA meetings. We drive the same streets. We bump carts at the supermarket. We vote in local elections. Like you, we share community problems and we share community pride. We think there's much to be proud about.

We're more than your local telephone company. We're neighbors.

CONGRATULATIONS ...

To the entire Athletic Department for a fantastic year —
Keep up the good work!

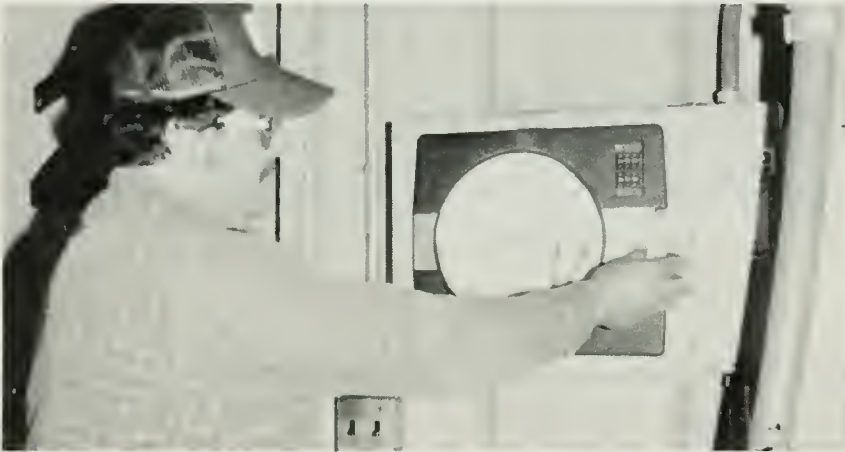

Career Opportunities in the Wood Products Industry

Delbert Lambert, grade sawyer, in an enclosed heated cab, uses a Corley, a computer-operated setworks, to get the greatest yield from the log for grade for the furniture industry.

Christopher Hoover, a BHS and Haywood Technical College graduate, operates a 920 Caterpillar forklift to feed logs into mill for further processing.

Eric Hoover, a BHS and Haywood Technical College graduate, checks the electronic controls of the Nyle Dehumidification Dry-Kiln where the moisture content of the lumber is taken down to 6-8%.

Logs, previously evaluated for quality for a forester, arrive in the log yard.

Greg Coffman, a BHS graduate and recent graduate of the National Hardwood Lumber Inspection School, Memphis, TN, grades and measures the lumber as it moves down the green chain.

Danny Sherman, a BHS graduate, operates the Rosser-Head Fulghum debarker as the logs enter the mill. The processed bark is used for mulching and bedding.

The Lords of Discipline!

Epilogue

Band goons at play.

Streakbusters on duty!

Coach Leake lays his finger beside his nose.

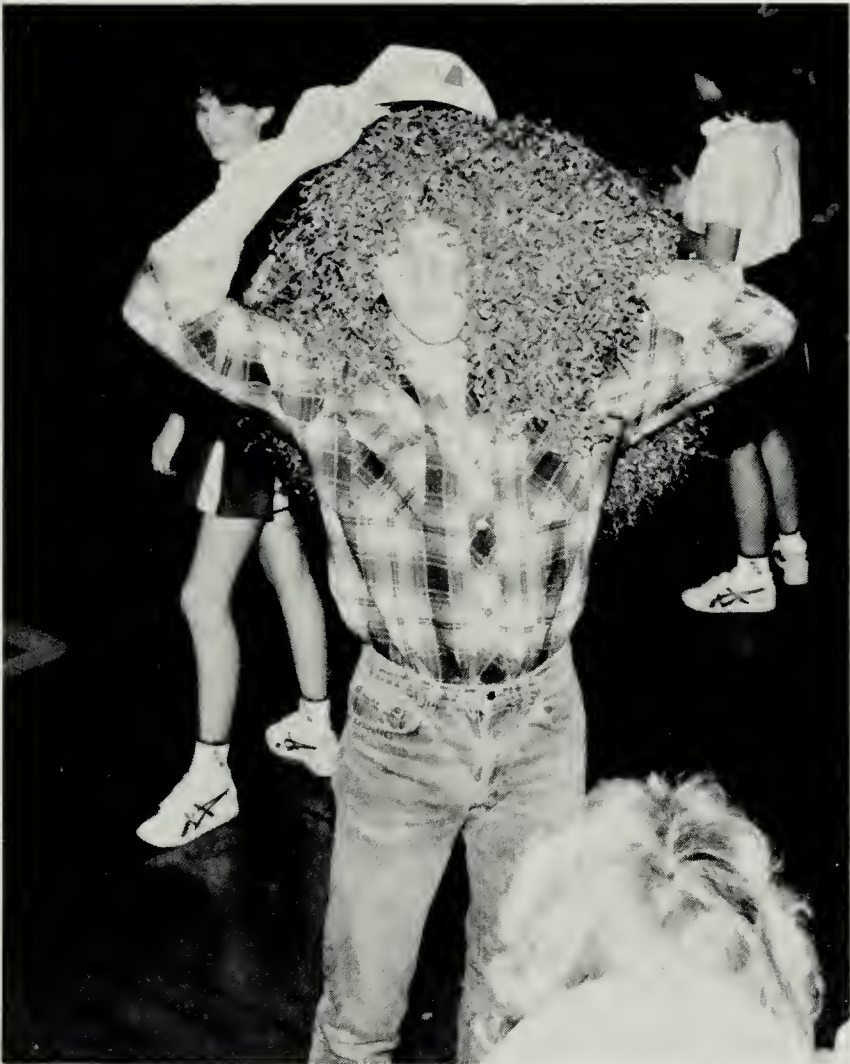

Trudy, Shane and Merle Norman.

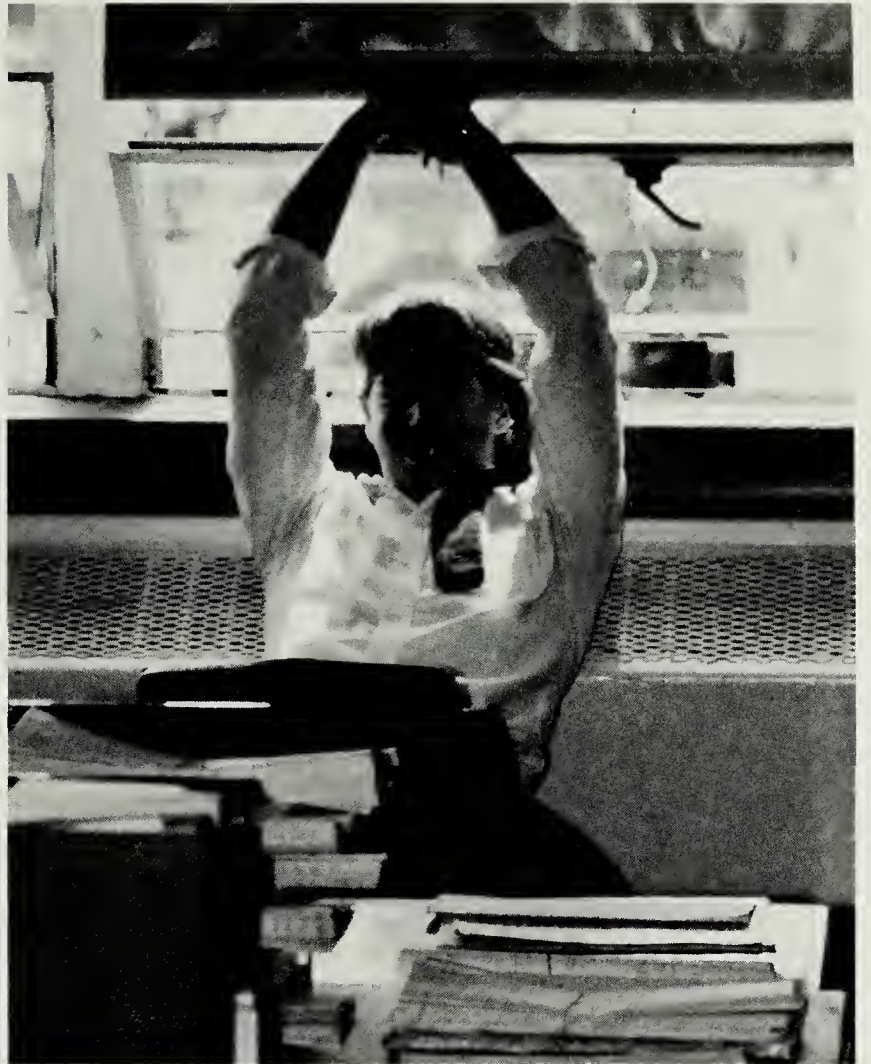

The cooks smile over surprise stew.

Gina and Wendy loiter in the hall.

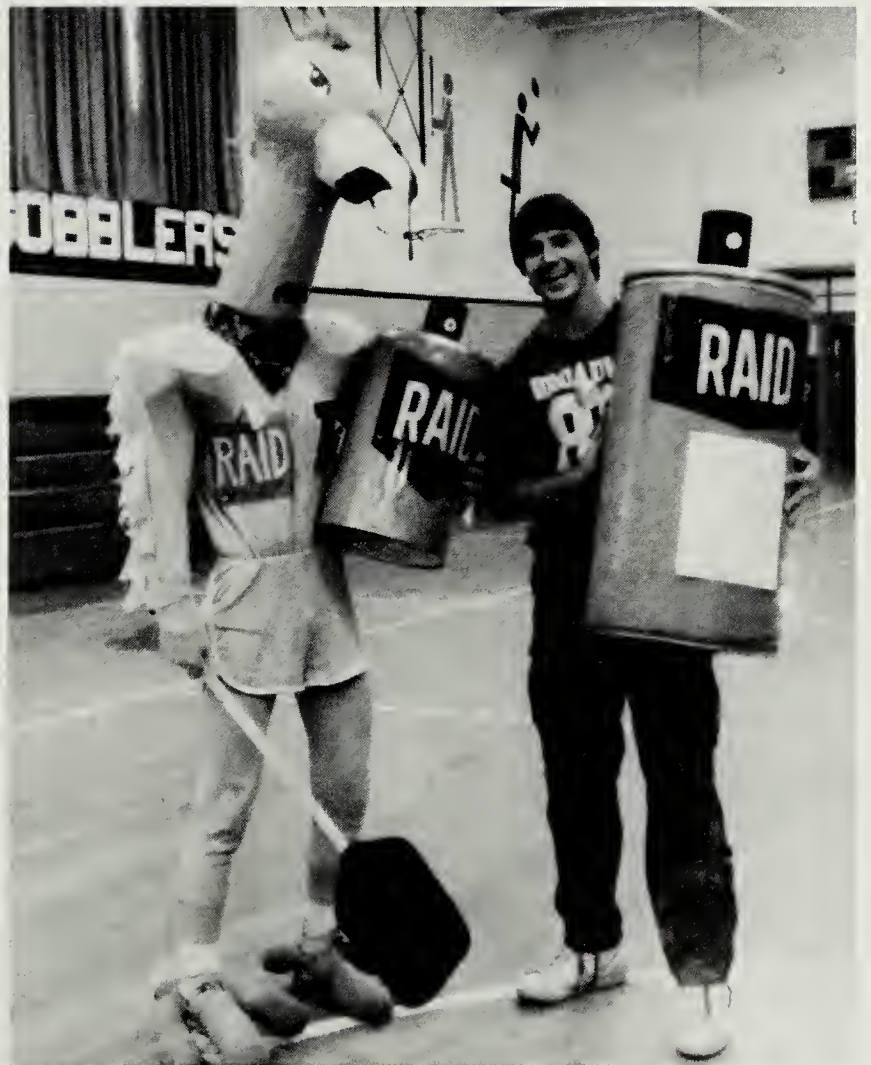

Broadways' first male cheerleader!

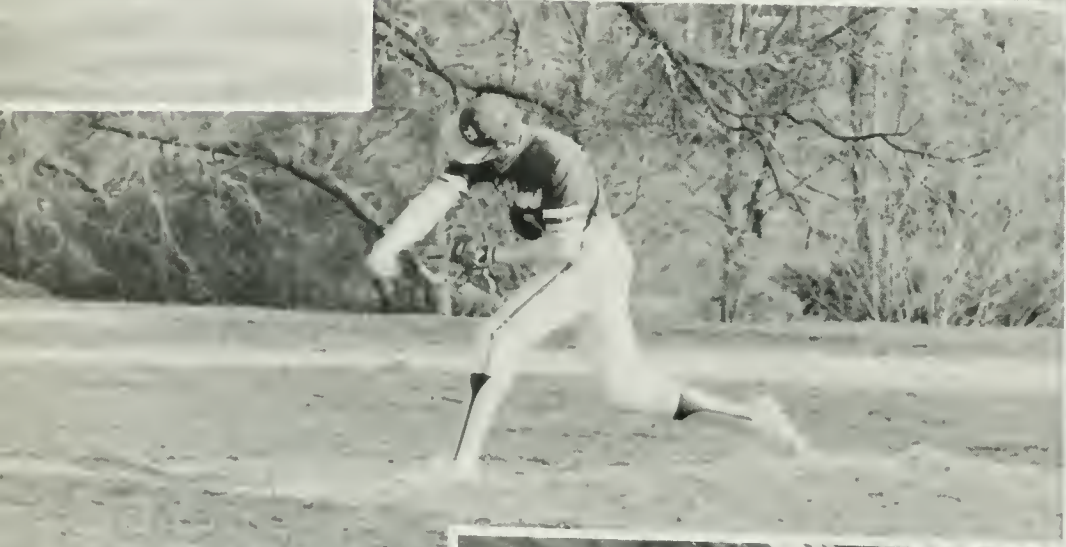

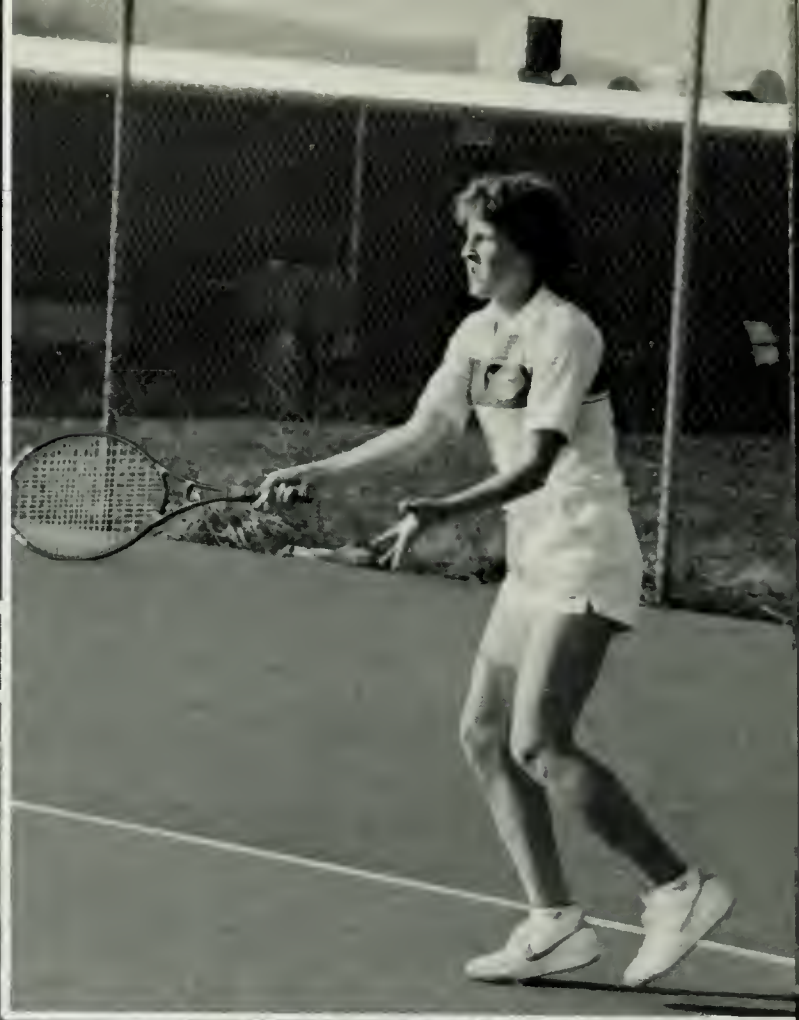

"Don't do it, Brian!!"

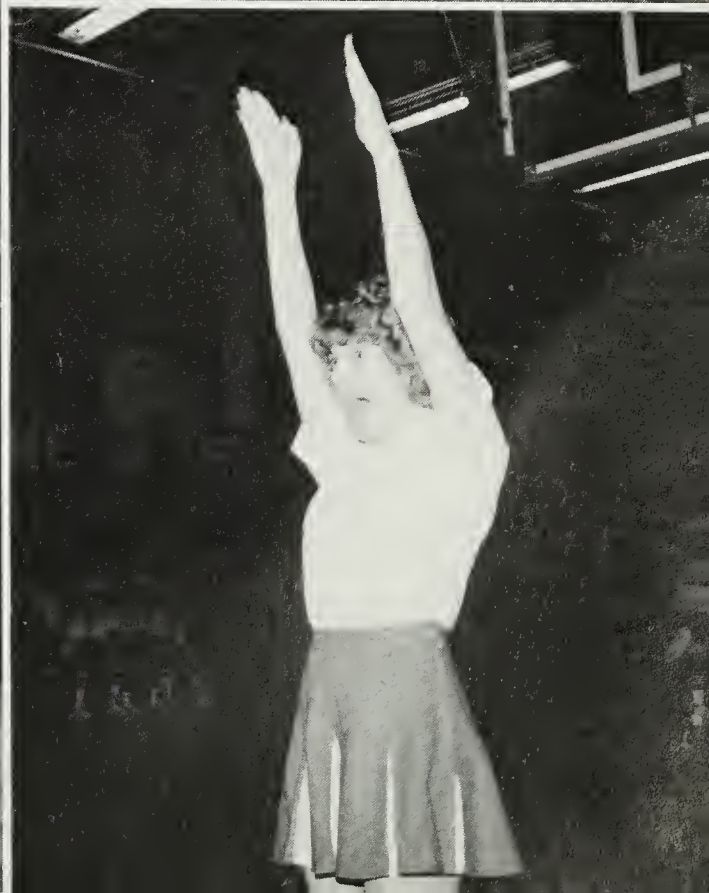

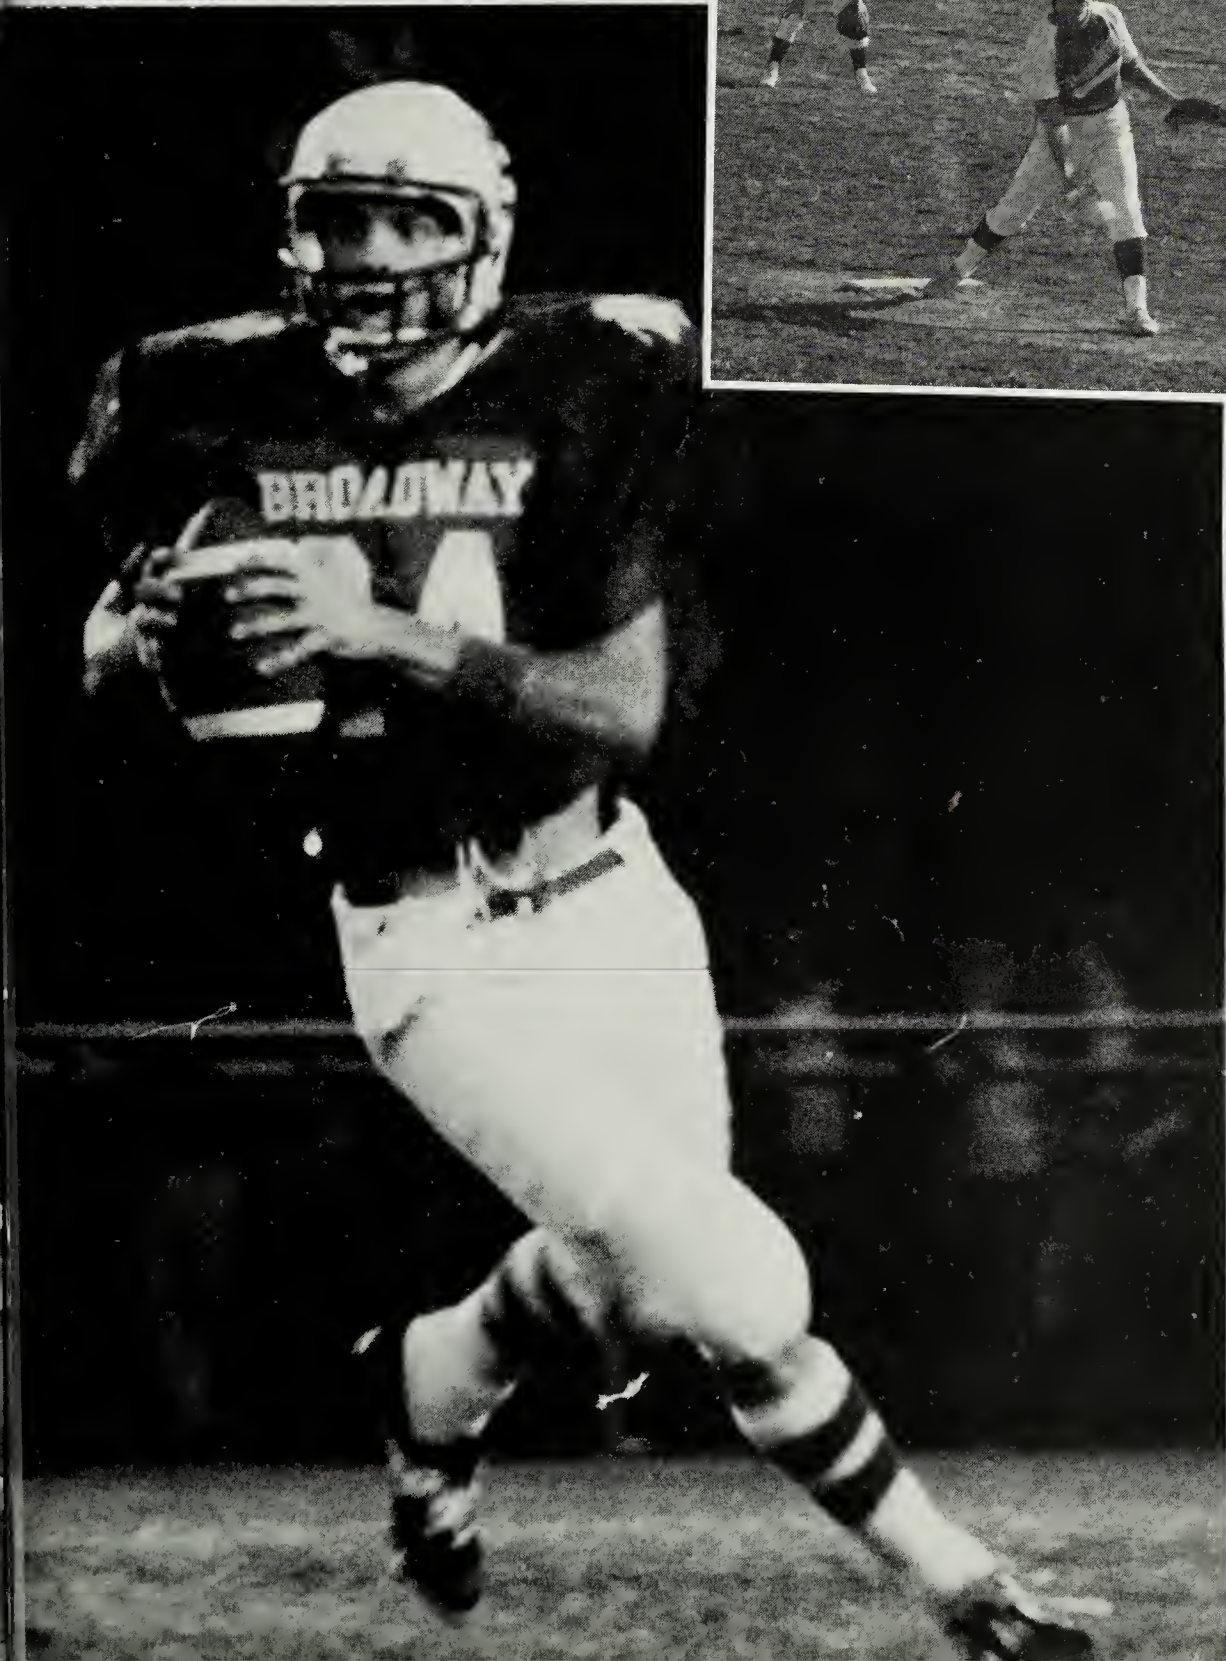

"Can we talk?"

Tony and Jerry arm themselves.

*We cannot turn back
For yesterday is gone.
Tomorrow is beckoning
We must move on.*
